Createspace, United States, 2014. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 229 x 152 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Discussions of Part 1 of Book 4 School Development and Lifelong Learning collaborate on how the principles of open system may assist create strategies for developing a new type of educational organization such as the Democratic School to serve multicultural education. To develop the new education organization, developers have to take on a leadership role to establish the mission, vision, purpose, and functional goals of the school. The shaping, enhancement, and maintenance of a school's culture are primary responsibilities of the school's leaders (Short Greer, 2002). Democratic education has its core ideals of inquiry, discourse, equity, authenticity, shared leadership, and service. Educators should remember that democracy and democratic education are not conditions that have been achieved, but ideals that everyone (students, parents, teachers, administrators, and the community) must stand for. Discussions of Part 2 of Book 4 collaborate on life-learning principles, concepts, and strategies. Although differences between life cycles have existed, it is essential to know how these differences impact learning of a variety age groups. Carroll model for Mastery learning (p. 254) is one of the practical applications that may help those who create learning programs for different age students. This part includes an exploration of Book Illustration course, which was prepared for teaching a variety of age groups of students since birth to the final stage of the life cycles. This course included seven educational programs, prepared for implementation on practice. Discussions of Part 3 of Book 4 collaborate on learning theories used by teachers according to students age group with the focus on teenage group. Taking into account that Adolescence period is the most complicated and important period of life cycle, educators have...
