This question has arisen from a false ascription of sex to the human mind. We have heard so much about male education, and female education, that in public estimation, both mind and education have been divided into masculine and feminine; and these distinctions have been kept up, till one might suppose that woman belonged to a different order of beings. Not the female sex of man; but a charming creature, caught in a net, to be caged for the gratification of man s curiosity; to sip from her own peculiar cup; nibble her own peculiar cake; and, like a bird of note, be admired more or less according to the number of airs she might learn to sing: while the ruder sex are to be treated as rational beings, and to be educated for purposes of utility. But suppose God had created mind male and female, does it follow that each sex should have a different sort of education? - What would you think of the father, who having both sons and daughters, should fall into the conceit that there was danger the former might dwindle clown into girls, and the latter grow up into boys; and, to prevent such a disaster, should feed his sons on bread and beef to make them robust, and his daughters on ice cream and candy to make them delicate? But no man is guilty...
